LAW CLASS OF '95.

—HISTORY—

MANIFOLD are the tastes of the enlightened literati who will peruse these pages, and read herein the history of this most remarkable class.

But we pray you, gentle reader, not to scan indifferently these few lines, but to ponder deep and well upon this record of the achievements of the class of '95 whose graduation is to mark an epoch in the history of our Alma Mater.

On the 26th day of September, 1893, we knocked at the doors of the University and asked admission. The gentle zephyrs of morning fanned our youthful* faces, and whispered tales of future greatness, as we for the first time beheld the classic walls of Indiana University.

With a deep sense of the importance of our position, and of the moment of the work which lay before us, we entered upon our arduous duties, realizing that upon the result of our labors depended, in a great measure, the future welfare of the state and nation. From the beginning, we displayed that breadth of learning, that soundness of judgment, and that legal acumen which presaged our future greatness, and our ability to cope with the difficulties of the situation.

The numerous legal problems which presented themselves to us for solution, and which had caused such eminent jurists as Coke and Story to pause and reflect, were solved by us with signal ease and rapidity, and, as a consequence, safe and reliable precedents were laid down for future generations of lawyers.

We have been of inestimable benefit, especially to the Junior Law Class. With brotherly kindness we have guided their faltering footsteps through the mazes of Blackstone and Kent, and, throwing the mantle of charity over their imperfections, we have encouraged them by our modesty, deportment, and studious habits.

*How about the Librarian?

Not to the Junior Laws alone have we given the benefit of our valuable advice, but alike to all classes, from the verdant Freshman to the sedate Senior, have we been as an elder brother, giving to all the advantage of our wide experience and varied knowledge of University affairs.

We sincerely sympathize with the University at large, and particularly with the Faculty, over our inability to be with them longer. But we trust that the seed that we have sown in the minds of our co-laborers and instructors has fallen on fertile ground, and that they will continue the work which has been commenced so auspiciously under our guidance.

Other fields† are calling us. Impatiently the public has awaited the time when, armed with the truth of the law and the time-honored sheepskin, we should make our debut into the world, and, grasping the helm of the Ship of State, should guide her safely through the troubled waters.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE JUNIOR LAW CLASS.

WHEREAS, It is a presumption of law that we are the gol darndest best law class ever in the institution; and, whereas, we don't care a cuss who knows it; and, whereas, Indiana University, together with all the rest of the "movable equipments" of the universe, circumvolves around the upper half of the east end of the library; and, whereas, the "Annual" has not taken judicial notice of our superiority, and has not given us representation on the Board proportionate thereto.

Therefore be it resolved, That we express our righteous indignation at such usurpation of our authority; and, be it further resolved, that we make it our joint and several determination to bust up the whole shebang, and that we condescend to permit the allowance of a copy of these resolutions to be published in the next issue of the "Student."
