D. G. Boshkoff to head IU Law School

Special to The Courier-Journal

GARY, Ind.—Douglass G. Boshkoff, acting dean of the Indiana University School of Law since 1971, yesterday was named dean of the Law School by the Indiana University Board of Trustees at their meeting here on the IU Northwest Campus.

Boshkoff joined Indiana University's Bloomington faculty in 1962 as visiting associate professor of law. The following year he was given a full time appointment as associate professor. In 1965, he became professor of law. That same year he was voted outstanding professor by law students. He teaches securities regulations and bankruptcy.

Before coming to Indiana University, Dean Boshkoff was a teaching fellow at Harvard Law School, and assistant professor and then an associate professor at Wayne State University Law School, and finally a visiting professor at Boston College Law School.

Boshkoff, a native of Buffalo, N.Y., was born in 1930. He holds the AB and LLB degrees from Harvard University.

He is married to the former Ruth Joy Osborne, and they have four children.

Dean Boshkoff is a member of the American, Indiana, New York, and Michigan Bar Associations and the American Association of University Professors.

Dean Boshkoff succeeds William B. Harvey who resigned Nov. 1, 1971.
