Every Name Has a Place

Each year I have the honor of thanking alumni and friends for the vital role you play in advancing the progress of the Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington. This year, I am thrilled to announce that, for the first time in the School’s history, our Fund for Excellence exceeded $1 million. I am struck by the great variety of donors and donations to the School. From foundations to families, from gifts of time to gifts of treasure, every name in this Dean’s Report has a place in ensuring that Indiana Law achieves its vision of increased visibility and influence in the state, the nation, and around the world.

In this report, we attempt to recognize and thank every person and organization who has been of service to Indiana Law for contributions. Your gifts are varied — from judging the Sherman Minton Moot Court Competition (sponsored by Bose McKinney & Evans LLP) to giving generously to name a scholarship or clinic.

I would like especially to thank every person who has given his or her time to the Law School. This is the first Dean’s Report in which we sought to acknowledge our army of volunteers.

The Indiana Law community lost a dedicated volunteer and alumnus this fall. Joe Board Jr., JD’58, gave many gifts of time and talent. We remember him with special gratitude among the volunteers recognized in this publication, (see p. 37).

The task of compiling names of the hundreds who have given their time was a daunting, but welcome, challenge; our alumni and friends are so helpful. In my five years as dean, I have met and talked with thousands of alumni. I come away from each of these encounters with new ideas to enrich the School. And our students benefit tremendously from your coming here to serve as practitioners-in-residence, to serve on advisory boards, and to help in all the myriad ways that you serve Indiana Law.

Just as there are many ways to affect Indiana Law through volunteer service, your financial investments in the School also take many forms. In this Dean’s Report, we focus on scholarships. Scholarships are critical in Indiana Law’s mission to provide a transformational education, and I am deeply grateful to the diverse group who committed to funding the scholarships that ensure our students grow to be the ethical lawyers and leaders of tomorrow.

In recognition of the vast importance of scholarships, Indiana University has instituted a matching program... for endowed scholarships above $150,000. Scholarship gifts of $250,000 and above are matched by IU in perpetuity. For gifts of $150,000 to $250,000, funds are matched 1:2. This opportunity to leverage funds for our students is unprecedented.

We are fortunate to have generous donors who have already taken advantage of this program, creating their own legacies while helping our students achieve educational and professional goals.

In previous issues of this publication, we profiled George Gossman, JD’66, Don Dorfman, JD’57, and Professor Gene Shreve. All have given scholarships that qualify for matching funds. I am delighted to report this year that several new scholarships will also generate matching funds. Two of these gifts come from families.

Alumnus Michael McLoughlin, JD’73, his wife, Susie, and their children established the McLoughlin Family Scholarship this fiscal year. David Elmore, JD’58, and his son, D.G. Elmore Jr., JD/MBA’84, endowed the Elmore Family Scholarship, through a transformational gift of $3 million (see p. 13). Both David and D.G. are successful entrepreneurs. Their contribution named Indiana Law’s innovative Entrepreneurship Law Clinic, and, most importantly, provides multiple scholarships for joint-JD/MBA students and JD students who are interested in business law. Our students are truly fortunate to benefit from these generous gifts.

The depth and breadth of support continued this year with scholarship gifts from corporations, foundations, individual collections, and special campaigns. Firestone Natural Rubber Co. pledged $50,000 to support students from Liberia, where the Law School is working to rebuild the law faculty (see p. 18). And in an exciting campaign to honor retiring U.S. Magistrate Judge V. Sue Shields, JD’61, Kristin Freuhwald of Barnes & Thornburg procured donations from more than 200 alumni, law firms, bar associations, attorneys, and other friends and admirers of Judge Shields. More than $100,000 was raised to endow a scholarship in Shields’s honor (see p. 20).

These are just a few examples of your incredible investment in Indiana Law’s future. Every name listed in this publication represents a person or organization that has contributed greatly to the Law School. I am honored to be a part of this community, and I hope to have the opportunity to thank you in person soon.

All my best,

Lauren K. Robel, JD’83
Dean and Val Nolan Professor of Law
On behalf of the Arthur M. Lotz Office of Alumni and Development, thank you for your generous support of the Law School. This has been an exciting year. For the first time ever, your Fund for Excellence contributions exceeded the $1 million mark. Some 2,123 alumni, friends, corporations, and foundations contributed a total of $1,096,743 — a 33-percent increase from 2005–06. Indiana Law's alumni participation rate of 21.4 percent compares favorably to our peers in the Big Ten.

What does this mean for Indiana Law? Our faculty received an increase in their summer research stipends for the first time since 1987. Significant increases in scholarship funding allowed us to attract an amazing incoming class, whose median LSAT scores rank in the top nine percent nationally. The Office of Career Services was able to implement new programs that assist in achieving a 98.6-percent placement rate. Healthy alumni participation also helped us secure funding from foundations and corporations for research centers, scholarships, and other strategic initiatives. Every gift, no matter what the size, is extremely important in ensuring that Indiana Law achieves its vision of increased visibility and influence in the state, the nation, and around the world.

We extend our sincere gratitude to those many volunteers who help make the Fund for Excellence a success. Special congratulations are in order for Don Dorfman, Class Agent for the Class of 1957, who achieved a 53-percent participation from his class and raised more than $70,000. Frank Tolbert, Class of 1955, came in second for participation at 48.6 percent; Ted Waggner and James Kowalik, Class of 1978, came in second for total dollars raised at $43,794.

We are also pleased to report the outstanding results of this year's class pledge campaign (see p. 30). More than 53 percent of the Class of 2007 committed to five-year pledges totaling more than $67,500. Both the participation rate and money raised set new records for our class pledge campaigns, and we are excited that these new alumni have raised the bar for the classes that follow.

Our law firm and corporate representatives also did a tremendous job this year in their efforts on behalf of the Fund for Excellence. Bose McKinney & Evans; Cohen Garlick & Glazier; DeLaney & DeLaney; Hackman Hulett & Cracraft; Sidley & Austin; Stuart & Branigin; and Wagner Reese & Crossen all achieved 100-percent participation from their alumni. The top firms for dollars raised were Baker & Daniels, Bingham McHale, Bose McKinney & Evans, Ice Miller, and Jones Day. Many thanks to the wonderful volunteers who worked with their colleagues to achieve these results.

Every gift acknowledged in this Dean's Report is important in implementing the goals set forth in our Strategic Plan. This year's report focuses on how scholarships and those that fund them fulfill our mission of providing a transformational education for our students. Scholarships allow us to attract the best and brightest students, giving them the opportunity to develop into ethical legal practitioners and good citizens of our global community.

On behalf of Indiana Law students, faculty, and staff, thank you for your continued support.

Matching the Promise

Introducing a $30 million campaign for Indiana Law

On Nov. 3, 2007, the Law School publicly joined the Bloomington campus in this historic effort to expand scholarship opportunities for students in a climate of rising tuition and declining state support. The seven-year campaign began in July 2003, and Indiana Law: Matching the Promise has already raised $16.5 million toward our campaign goal of $30 million by June 2010.

Indiana Law: Matching the Promise focuses on raising private support for endowed scholarships. State support has dwindled to just 7.2 percent of our net revenue, and the School has been forced to raise tuition precipitously. In fact, resident tuition has nearly tripled since 1998 and is now more than $17,000 per year.

A reliance on tuition dollars to fund the programmatic and curricular innovations that propel the School forward puts a heavy burden on our students and threatens the values of public education Indiana Law represents. We must provide scholarship assistance to ensure that academically accomplished, community-minded students have access to an excellent legal education regardless of their financial circumstances.

The ability to recruit and retain intellectually engaged students also directly affects the School’s visibility as a national leader among law schools. In the competitive environment in which law schools operate today, it is imperative that Indiana Law have the necessary scholarship funds to attract students with the strongest credentials. Strong students evolve into distinguished alumni. This next generation must continue to speak volumes about the quality of an Indiana Law degree, enhancing the degree’s value for all who hold it.

In recognition of the need to expand our scholarship resources with private support, Indiana University is giving donors the chance to double the effective value of their gifts. For example, a $250,000 gift generates five percent a year — or $12,500 — to be applied to scholarships. The campus matches that with another $12,500, so the gift effectively produces a $25,000 scholarship every year in perpetuity. Law School scholarship gifts must reach a $150,000 threshold to be eligible for a match.

Many of our alumni and friends have already taken advantage of this momentous opportunity to leverage their generosity and give back to the next generation of students. Your gift could enable a student to focus more on the challenges and rewards of an excellent legal education, rather than on how he or she will pay for it. Your gift could enable someone to take advantage of Indiana Law’s growing clinical opportunities, rather than take a second job. Your gift may reduce a student’s debt and enable him or her to work in the public sector after graduation, thereby increasing our community’s access to justice. Your gift could transform a student’s life. Every dollar counts in this campaign, and your participation is critical to the future of the Law School.

Meet Bill Hunt, Chair of Indiana Law: Matching the Promise

The Arthur M. Lotz Office of Alumni & Development is delighted to introduce V. William Hunt, JD’69, as the chair of our Indiana Law: Matching the Promise campaign.

Hunt’s business and legal acumen have carried him through a successful career, and the School is confident that his leadership will bring this campaign to a successful close.

Hunt earned both his BA and JD from Indiana University and is a graduate of the Harvard Business School’s Advanced Management Program. He is chairman of Hunt Capital Partners LLC, a venture capital and consulting firm based in Indianapolis. An active member of the Law School’s Board of Visitors and the Kelley School of Business Dean’s Advisory Council, he also serves a valuable role on the IU Foundation Board of Directors.

Hunt’s generosity is not limited to his service to Indiana University. He is Clarian Health Partners’ chairman of the board and sits on the boards of numerous for-profit and not-for-profit organizations including Brightpoint LLC, the world’s largest cell phone distributor; Breeze Industrial Products; RollCoater Inc., North America’s leading coil-coating company; My Health Care Manager LLC; Sentelligence LLC; and InProteo, a joint venture of Eli Lilly, IU, and Purdue University.

Prior to developing Hunt Capital Partners, he was vice chairman and president of ArvinMeritor Inc., a $7 billion global supplier of a broad range of integrated systems, modules, and components for light vehicle, commercial truck, trailer, and specialty original equipment manufacturers and related after-markets, until 2001.

In April 2007, Hunt was inducted into the Academy of Law Alumni Fellows, the highest honor the Law School bestows upon its graduates. The Indiana Law community is deeply grateful to him for his leadership and commitment to the future of the Law School.

We recently asked the successful entrepreneur some important questions regarding Indiana Law: Matching the Promise.

Q. Why do we need another campaign?

A. The School’s last campaign, Law for a New Century, focused on faculty support, taking advantage of a generous matching opportunity from IU.

Efforts in that campaign by my alumni colleagues and friends created 14 new endowed chairs and professorships.
Before the campaign, Indiana Law had only one endowed chair and ranked near the bottom of the Big Ten in terms of faculty support. Now, we lead the Big Ten on this metric.

It has been seven years since that campaign closed. In the world of higher education, especially as state funding continues to decline, that is a long time. Now it is time to focus on our students.

Q. Why is Indiana Law raising money for students in this campaign?

A. Indiana Law’s faculty is impressive. These scholars deserve to teach equally impressive students. Right now, our endowment is insufficient. It can’t provide the depth of financial aid necessary to recruit these exceptional students. Each year, we lose promising prospective students to competitor schools that are able to provide more scholarship support than we can. With the matching opportunity now available from IU, this is the ideal time to make a commitment that counts.

Q. Why do students need scholarships? Isn’t the School state-supported?

A. When many of my peers and I attended Indiana Law, the institution was state-supported. Now, it is a different story. Less than 10 percent of the School’s net budget is drawn from state appropriations. The School has been forced to raise tuition over the years to compensate for this decrease in state funding. In 1977, Indiana-resident tuition was $36 per credit hour, which worked out to roughly $1,080 per year. Today a resident tuition costs $17,075; non-residents pay nearly $34,000.

Indiana Law takes seriously its commitment to the values of public education. Rising tuition threatens those values. Our students leave law school with roughly $70,000 in student loan debt. And our scholarship offerings are falling behind other schools. Highly qualified students — even Indiana residents — have elected to go to competitor schools because of better financial aid.

Endowed scholarships ensure that future generations of Indiana Law students enjoy the same opportunities we did as they strive toward professional goals.

Q. How will this campaign change the School?

A. Your participation in a successful campaign furthers our vision of increased visibility for Indiana Law, as stated in the Strategic Plan. If we take advantage of matching funds and focus on scholarships now, we have an opportunity to move into the Top 10 public law schools. Currently, Indiana Law is ranked 15th among public law schools according to U.S. News & World Report. Our ranking is critical to our ability to continue attracting top students and faculty, and to the value of our degrees in a competitive legal marketplace.

“With the matching opportunity now available from IU, this is the ideal time to make a commitment that counts.” — Bill Hunt

Q. Is there a place for me in this campaign?

A. Yes. This is a comprehensive campaign, which means that every single dollar counts toward the achievement of our goal. Although scholarships are our first priority, faculty support, public interest fellowships, facility renovation, conferences, and programmatic support are also critical to the success of Indiana Law.

Of course, because this is a special occasion and matching funds are available for scholarships, we hope each donor will consider making a special gift to the campaign that endows one or more scholarships at the level that qualifies for a match.
Year Two: A Vision of Success

Since its release in 2005, the Strategic Plan has driven the Indiana Law community toward goals of increased visibility and strengthened influence on the legal profession in a global sense. At the close of the 2006–07 academic year — the second in our five-year plan — our ambitious institutional objectives are firmly in sight.

Influential scholarship

One important strategic objective is to encourage faculty members to publish original, important scholarship in influential venues.

We are pleased to report that in 2006–07, full-time, tenure-track faculty members produced four books, five new casebook editions, 52 law journal articles, 30 book chapters, and 26 additional scholarly works. Indiana Law scholars also presented at 180 universities, academic and professional organizations, and governmental or NGO meetings in 2006. This important work was again featured prominently in the media, enjoying 155 placements that included the nation's top five newspapers as well as the Chronicle of Higher Education, the National Law Journal, PBS, CNN, MSNBC, and NPR.

This year, Jody Madeira and Timothy W. Waters, two productive and promising scholars, joined our community as tenure-track faculty. Both will have a significant impact on their respective fields and ensure the School’s academic progress in the coming year.

Preparing students for the profession

In keeping with our commitment to provide an updated and relevant curriculum, Indiana Law has adopted the most significant first-year curriculum change in almost 20 years.

Beginning in 2008–09, first-year law students will take The Legal Profession, an innovative new course designed to introduce future lawyers to the nature, sociology, economics, and ethical landscape of the modern legal profession. This new focus on professionalism is at the forefront of a broad response to the Carnegie Foundation’s path breaking study of U.S. law schools, “Educating Lawyers: Preparation for the Profession of Law.”

With this study as a catalyst, Indiana Law continues to strengthen clinical and professional skill-building opportunities. This year, we introduced a professional skills requirement for our students and developed the Nonprofit Legal Clinic and Washington Public Interest Program as additions to our thriving clinical program.

Influencing the global legal landscape

Indiana Law continues to capitalize on new avenues for interdisciplinary and collaborative research and teaching, particularly those that are available to us as part of one of the nation’s premier research institutions.

We are fortunate to claim investment in the Center for Law, Society, and Culture; the Center for Constitutional Democracy in Plural Societies (CCDPS); and the Center for Applied Cybersecurity Research. These outstanding existing IU centers provide a key locus for global, collaborative work. In further evidence of the Law School’s connection to a campus-wide emphasis on internationalization and globalization, Professor David Fidler serves as director of a new Indiana University Center on American and Global Security, and Dean Lauren Robel facilitated creation of the Indiana Democracy Consortium.

To increase funding for these and other important programs, Assistant Dean for Research Archana Sridhar joined the School. She has already assisted with a major grant application on behalf of the CCDPS and grant applications on behalf of the Center for American and Global Security, as well as working in support of many faculty members seeking external grants and fellowships.

Gaining perspective

Our alumni and friends remain critically important in our efforts to implement the Strategic Plan. Together, we have achieved much. Still, there are many more areas of opportunity for the School.

Moving toward ultimate success, the School appealed to Indiana University’s new president, Michael McRobbie, to arrange for a panel of top legal educators to visit during the coming year. These educators will conduct a wide-ranging and candid review of our program and efforts. This external review process will be a first for Indiana University, and through it, Indiana Law will gain new perspectives and new ideas that can help us to become an even greater public law school.

About the Honor Roll of Donors

Through annual gifts from donors, Indiana Law has been able to sustain and consistently expand resources for law journals, trial advocacy programs, scholarships, and the Law Library among many other programs.

The School community is deeply grateful to its donors for their investments. Every gift promotes the success of the School, as we strive to provide a transformative education for our students.

The 2006–07 Honor Roll of Donors reflects gifts from July 1, 2006, to June 30, 2007. Gifts up to $25,000—including unrestricted gifts and annual gifts to student organizations, scholarships, and the Law Library—are recognized as contributions to the Fund for Excellence. An asterisk (*) indicates that the donor is deceased.

The following list reflects far more than the names of people who have given substantial donations to the Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington. These donors’ lives have been touched in some way through their contact with this law school, and their experiences have inspired them to reach out and help others. The 21st Century Society honors those valued friends and alumni who demonstrate an ongoing commitment through annual gifts to the Fund for Excellence of $1,000 or more. Indiana Law is grateful for their loyalty and generosity, which is the foundation of the annual fund.

This spring, David Elmore, JD’58, and his son, D.G. Elmore, JD/MBA’84, announced a $3 million gift to the IU School of Law—Bloomington to fund scholarships for Entrepreneurship Law Clinic students, joint JD/MBA candidates, and students demonstrating a strong interest in business law. In recognition of this significant commitment, the Law School formally named the Elmore Entrepreneurship Law Clinic during a well-attended ceremony on Oct. 5.

IU President Michael A. McRobbie spoke at the dedication ceremony. “This gift gives permanency to the clinic,” he said. “It provides the foundation from which this clinic can continue to grow. It supports endowed scholarships to recruit the very best students, and it increases the dividends IU joint-degree students realize from their clinical experience.”

Unique in the country, the clinic provides fourth-year JD/MBA and third-year JD students the opportunity to assist start-up ventures with high-growth potential in areas such as the life sciences and information technology. The joint venture between the School of Law and Kelley School of Business capitalizes on legal and business expertise and provides hands-on transactional legal experience to clinic students.

Blending marketplace ideas with legal expertise, the Elmore Clinic mirrors the values of both father and son. D.G. Elmore crafted his own specialized degree when he attended IU in the 1950s. He took MBA classes in the summers between his regular law school coursework. The joint degree was not officially offered until the early 1970s, so David Elmore may even be the “original” IU JD/MBA student.

Over the years, the Elmore family’s entrepreneurial spirit has been well documented. David Elmore owns and chairs the Elmore Sports Group, a highly successful conglomerate in the sports and entertainment industry. The company owns six minor league baseball and hockey teams as well as several companies in areas that include travel, facilities, and special events management, and sports marketing. In 1989, he was named IU “Entrepreneur of the Year” and was inducted into the Law School’s Academy of Law Alumni Fellows in 2006.

D.G. Elmore is chairman and owner of two minor league baseball teams as well as industry-leading companies in corporate travel management, software development, micro staffing, education publishing, and manufacturing. “The education that I received in the Indiana University JD/MBA program continues to be one of the most important experiences of my life,” he said. “The Elmore Entrepreneurship Law Clinic is an integral part of one of the country’s best JD/MBA programs, and I am glad that we can give back to the university and to future students in this way.”

D.G. and David Elmore

Paul G. Jasper Scholarship

A Stronger Foundation

“Scholarships open up more opportunities for law students, give students more time to concentrate on studies and academic activities,” said third-year law student and Jasper scholar Jennifer Hesch. “With a reduced debt load and the freedom to explore clinical experiences, concentrate on coursework, and participate in student organizations, I have gained valuable insights, knowledge, and skills. The Jasper Scholarship helps me build a stronger foundation for my mission of work in law and advocacy for children with special needs.”

Hesch, who was an undergraduate cross-country runner, is one of six recipients of the Paul G. Jasper Scholarship, established in memory of Paul G. Jasper, LLB’32, a talented IU athletics standout and dedicated alumnus.

Jasper’s widow, Mary Tucker Jasper, and children, Jamia Jasper Jacobsen and Paul Tucker Jasper, wanted to open doors for students with a background in collegiate varsity athletics and financial need. “My dad loved IU because it built his career, and his love and dedication to the School only grew. Even in his early 90s, he would travel to watch Moot Court arguments,” daughter Jamia Jasper Jacobsen said. “In so many ways, the scholarship carries on everything that he was. It honors his loyalty and helps other students who share his love for education and enthusiasm for sports.”
A $50,000 contribution by Firestone Natural Rubber Co. helps support Indiana Law’s commitment to help rebuild the University of Liberia’s Louis Arthur Grimes School of Law. Scholarship recipients Jallah Barbu, Chan-Chan Paegar, and Betty Blamo, all practicing lawyers in Monrovia, will return to the school as faculty with advanced degrees.

Through the work of the Center on Constitutional Democracy in Plural Societies, Indiana Law has for several years supported constitutional democracy in countries such as Liberia, which suffered from a civil war marked by ethnic, linguistic, and other divisions.

The scholarships will help build the law faculty at the University of Liberia School of Law, which experienced considerable destruction and financial instability during the war.

“The scholarship and the work of the CCDPS provide me a great opportunity to be adequately prepared to serve my country and contribute to improving the relationship between the United States and my country,” said Jallah Barbu, who also serves as general secretary of the Liberian National Bar Association and has headed two committees that drafted the act on freedom of information and the press and the mediation law of Liberia. “We shall take back to Liberia the knowledge and experience we are acquiring to assist in training future lawyers and contribute to the overall development of the legal profession in Liberia.”

Firestone Natural Rubber Co., which has operated in Liberia since 1926, is committed to helping bring stability to the country by rebuilding schools and training teachers. “Firestone firmly believes education is the key to a brighter future in Liberia. It will bring hope to the country and its young people,” said Dan Adomitis, president of the Indianapolis-based company. “Firestone applauds these scholarship recipients for their commitment to restoring Liberia and is pleased to join with Indiana Law to enhance legal education in the country.”

More than 200 individuals contributed approximately $100,000 to a named scholarship fund honoring the career of former U.S. Magistrate V. Sue Shields, JD’61.

This year’s third-year environmental law student Angela King, is inspired by Shields’ trailblazing accomplishments as the first female federal magistrate in Indiana, the first female Indiana appeals court judge, and the first woman elected as an Indiana general jurisdiction judge. “She’s a strong woman who knew what she wanted,” said King.

King also has lofty goals for a career in environmental law, and the scholarship helps provide her the opportunity take full advantage of her time in law school. She is busy serving as managing editor for the Indiana Law Journal, legal intern for the Conservation Law Clinic, research assistant for Professor Rob Fischman, as well as helping develop the School’s new Nonprofit Legal Clinic.

“This scholarship allows me to focus solely on my legal studies, rather than worry about my financial situation,” said King, whose objective is to serve as executive director of a not-for-profit environmental organization or as a law professor. Her current studies center on agricultural conservation easements, energy law, and public-land development issues.

Honor Roll
Sherwood Blue, LLB’28, and Janet Roberts Blue, LLB’57, met through mutual friends while Janet was in law school, and they married in 1961. They practiced law together until 1967 when Janet began working for the Court of Appeals. In 1970, she was appointed Commissioner of Court of Appeals of Indiana. Devoted to their alma mater, Sherwood and Janet established a charitable remainder unitrust that would benefit Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington when they both passed away. In the meantime, Sherwood and Janet received the income from the trust during their lifetime.

This past spring, Indiana Law became the beneficiary of generous scholarship funds from the Sherwood and Janet Roberts Blue Educational and Charitable Trust. These merit scholarships benefit second- and third-year law students who have demonstrated academic excellence. This lasting gift will benefit generations of students at the Law School and will give them the opportunity to learn and grow as students and future practitioners. For Sherwood and Janet, this legacy is exactly what they wanted to leave behind.

Matching the Promise in Action

Don Dorfman, JD’57

Though he is now a successful West Coast defense lawyer, 1957 graduate Don Dorfman’s heart still belongs to Indiana University. He visits Bloomington every chance he gets and serves on a variety of IU committees and boards, including Indiana Law’s Board of Visitors and the Executive Council of the IU Alumni Association.

In 2005, he received the Law School’s Distinguished Service Award. He continues to promote IU in California as a student recruiter and as the long-time president of the Sacramento Alumni Club.

Why does Dorfman keep giving to IU? “I feel good when I give,” he happily admits. “Plus, I’d never be where I am today without the degrees I got from IU. Giving back gives me a great deal of satisfaction.”

This year, Dorfman took advantage of a special opportunity to double his gift through Indiana Law: Matching the Promise.

He wanted working law school students to benefit from his gift right away, so he added significantly to the Don P. Dorfman Scholarship Fund. With doubled funds, he was able to support fully a need-based scholarship.
Friends, faculty, staff, and students have a close bond to the School. The School of Law especially appreciates their support.

Before you decide the title of this article is an exaggeration, just listen to what the Indiana Law class of 2007 accomplished: pledges totaling $67,500 over the next five years. This commitment from students — who likely have debts and who may not have had a paycheck when they pledged their generosity — is truly incredible.

A simple argument

“We always said our class was extremely close,” said Laura Koenig, a co-chair of the fundraising committee. “We always said we were the best class ever.” So when the committee members met in the spring, they felt they could go beyond what was expected of them. And they did.

The month prior to graduation, committee members reached out. Their message was simple: Tuition and state funding pay for salaries, facilities, and a portion of the Law Library costs. But for organizations such as the Indiana Law Journal and the many law clinics and student groups, private support is a major source of funding.

“And for most of us, I think those experiences were some of the most rewarding from law school,” said Peter Wozniak, a committee member. “And if you got a scholarship to attend school, you knew that somebody before you gave that money so you could be here.”

This time, it’s personal

With a motto, Our Legacy: Make It Personal, committee members found many classmates were open to making a gift. That was impressive considering their audience consisted of people who may or may not have known about their future employment, and likely had some debt. Their strategy was not to ask people to give now, but over the course of five years starting in 2008.

“Everybody had something they were thankful for, and that was a great reason for them to give to those groups and causes,” said Stephanie Artnak, a committee co-chair. “But most of the people gave unrestricted funds.” Any fundraiser will tell you that those are the most difficult funds to raise. But at the Law School, it is those monies that can make or break a student organization’s budget, since they support sudden costs or supplement budgets for programs that don’t reach their funding goals.

Koenig says she even feels that those who chose not to give weren’t closed to the idea of ever supporting the School. And for that she’s happy, because the committee’s goal was to help young alumni understand that giving back should be part of their lives as alumni. “I think we held people to the notion that we are just this great class,” she said. “And now I know that this is how we’ll be remembered.”

Class of 2007 Campaign

Over the past three years, graduating Indiana Law students have made their regard for the School clear with the emergence of the Funding Our Future campaign. Through this campaign, students can make a pledge to the School to be allocated over five years. The School of Law thanks our recent graduates.

Tales of Time

Many alumni “pay it forward” by giving precious time to Indiana Law’s students and programs.

These volunteers give back because...

“...that’s what an alumnus is supposed to do. I owe my career in the law to the School of Law and the people there — how could I not try to return the favor?”
– Gregory A. Castanias, ’90

“...I have an obligation to give something back and pay forward. My experiences at the Law School form one of the major pillars for whatever success I might have attained. I have spent time counseling second- and third-year students on job searches and providing leads. I ask each of them to promise to do the same when they are 23 years out of school. Given the qualities that I see in these young people, I have great confidence that they will fulfill their commitments in the future.”

Tales of Time

Many alumni “pay it forward” by giving precious time to Indiana Law’s students and programs.

These volunteers give back because...

“... I never forget how my legal education opened the door to numerous opportunities and challenges. My Bloomington memories and friendships always make me smile and I enjoy any chance to talk to a law student and provide support where and when I can.”

“... I feel a sense of ownership that extends beyond the fact that my law diploma is from IU–Bloomington. I believe that the ongoing success and vitality of my alma mater is not the responsibility only of others. I also think that in my own small way I have something to contribute to the experience of those students of the law who followed me. And I’ve found that my volunteer activities are a source of fresh stimulation distinct from my everyday professional life.”

Many alumni “pay it forward” by giving precious time to Indiana Law’s students and programs.

These volunteers give back because...

“... I love it! The Law School provided me with a stellar legal education, career, and ‘tools of the trade’ that I draw upon constantly to help face my daily challenges as a trial attorney. The Law School enriched me in every way as a person, forcing me to grow, developing my strengths and confronting — and overpowering — my weaknesses. The Law School culled together and immersed me into a spectacular group of brilliant, ambitious, and kind individuals — both in and out of the classroom — several of whom have become treasured colleagues and friends for life. Indiana Law isn’t just a building, a school, or an education; it is a feeling, a spirit, a way of life. It is my honor and privilege to call Indiana Law my alma mater — and it always will be because it has become an integral, cherished, and ‘forever’ part of me.”

– Angela (Karras) Neboyskey, ’00

“... our students need to see living examples of successful practicing lawyers from IU. They are all over the country succeeding in all types of practices.”

– Rapheal M. Prevot Jr., ’84

Established in 1991 to provide a framework for lasting bequests and to foster future legal education, the Heritage Society honors friends and alumni who invest in the Indiana University School of Law through deferred gifts. These gifts provide funds for Law School projects, or they endow chairs, professorships, or scholarships. The generosity of Heritage Society members ensures that the School of Law can continue to offer the highest quality legal education.

Membership in the Heritage Society is open to all who make or have made a planned or deferred gift commitment to Indiana Law. This is accomplished by naming the IU School of Law—Bloomington as a beneficiary through a bequest in a will, charitable remainder unitrust, or annuity trust, pooled income fund, charitable gift annuity, life insurance, retirement plan, or other life-income arrangements. Members of the Heritage Society are automatically included in the Indiana University Foundation’s planned giving society — the Arbutus Society.

We are pleased to recognize and thank the members of the Heritage Society:

Giving to the Fund for Excellence

Annual giving is vital to the Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington’s mission to provide excellence in legal education. The Fund for Excellence — Indiana Law’s annual giving program — provides the dean with the flexibility to enhance academic and co-curricular programs that make the crucial difference between an adequate education and a truly excellent one.

Student programs

Law students benefit directly from your gift to the Fund for Excellence, which supports all of the Law School’s student services and programs beyond classroom education. Contributions to the Fund for Excellence go toward scholarships; three law journals; 25 student organizations; community advocacy programs; the Law Library; and the offices of Career Services, Admissions, and Student Affairs. These programs, to name only a few, are essential in preparing our students to serve the profession and their communities according to the highest standards.

Alumni support

Every gift to the Fund for Excellence, at any level, influences the School’s successes. Strong evidence of alumni support is important to the School’s ability to leverage funding from other sources. Corporations, foundations, and potential major donors frequently use alumni participation rates (i.e., how many alumni give, not the total amount of the gifts) when deciding whether to award grants or make significant gifts. Matching gifts from employers also increase dollars raised for the Fund for Excellence.

Reputation

The Fund for Excellence supports mission-critical programs that greatly improve the Law School’s reputation. As the School’s reputation increases, so does the value of your degree.
