

11-12-1906

Death of Judge Reinhard Casts Gloom Over University

Follow this and additional works at: <http://www.repository.law.indiana.edu/reinhard>

 Part of the Legal Biography Commons, and the Legal Education Commons

Recommended Citation

"Death of Judge Reinhard Casts Gloom Over University" (1906). George Reinhard (1902-1906). Paper 4.
<http://www.repository.law.indiana.edu/reinhard/4>

This Writing about Dean George Reinhard is brought to you for free and open access by the Law School Deans at Digital Repository @ Maurer Law. It has been accepted for inclusion in George Reinhard (1902-1906) by an authorized administrator of Digital Repository @ Maurer Law. For more information, please contact wattn@indiana.edu.

JEROME HALL LAW LIBRARY

INDIANA UNIVERSITY
Maurer School of Law
Bloomington

DEATH OF JUDGE REINHARD CASTS GLOOM OVER UNIVERSITY

The Golden Bow Is Broken, and the Spirit Is Fled Forever.
Law School of Indiana a Living Memorial to His Untiring Zeal.

It was with profound sadness and with deep sorrow that the melancholy fact was received July 14 by Indiana students over the State, that Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, had cut off in the prime of life, Judge George L. Reinhard, vice-president of Indiana University, dean of the law school, and one of the most distinguished jurists of the State.

The unexpected ending of a usedeath he went to Martinsville to take treatment at one of the sanatoriums, but he became worse immediately after arriving there, and was compelled to return home. He arrived in Bloomington Friday evening, July 13, at 7 o'clock, and with his family drove to his house. Shortly after going into the sitting room, while talking to his son-in-law, Major T. J. Loudon, he suddenly collapsed and fell to the floor.

THE LATE JUDGE G. L. REINHARD.

ful and honorable career, came with tragical suddenness; with stunning grief to the surviving relatives, and as a personal bereavement to each and every member of his co-workers in the faculty, and to his disciples and students, to whom the departed had endeared himself apart from his exceptionally meritorious work, by his sterling character, loyal nature, and lovable personality.

For several months the Judge had been in poor health, but the fatal termination was not expected. On the Wednesday before his

He expired in a few minutes. Death was due to heart trouble, which was brought about by fatty degeneration of the organ.

Judge Reinhard was regarded as one of the foremost jurists of the State. His opinions in the Appellate Court are noted for their clearness and strength. He is the author of "Reinhard's Indiana Criminal Practice," and "Reinhard's Agency," one of the authorities on the question of agencies.

He was past grand master of the Odd Fellows of Indiana. Perhaps the best example of his untiring efforts, however, is the law school of Indiana University. He worked with untiring zeal for the advancement of this institution and by his efforts made it one of the leading law schools of the West. He was prominent in the formation of the American Bar School Association. Since he had been dean of the college he had changed the system of instructions from the text methods to the case system.—THE EDITOR.
(Continued on page three.)

DEATH OF JUDGE REINHARD

(Continued from page one.)
