Faculty News

On September 16, 2011, Professor Leandra Lederman presented her co-authored paper, "Which Cases Settle? A Large-Scale Empirical Study of U.S. Tax Court Cases," at the Midwest Law & Economics Association meeting hosted by Professor Jeff Stake at the Maurer School of Law. The paper is co-authored with Daniel Martin Katz and Michael J. Bommarito II.

The Natural Resources Journal has just published an article Professor Rob Fischman wrote with a wildlife biologist, Bob Adamcik, titled "Beyond Trust Species: The Conservation Potential of the National Wildlife Refuge System in the Wake of Climate Change." You can download the pdf, exactly as printed, from SSRN. The article argues against a prevailing U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service theme for its programs to increase populations of an ill-defined collection of "trust species." Fischman and Adamcik propose a focus on ecological integrity for the Service's management of the national wildlife refuges. They also show, with specific examples, how the ecological integrity approach would more effectively adapt refuge conservation to climate change.
