

Winter 2015

Editors' Note

Alfred C. Aman

Indiana University Maurer School of Law, aaman@indiana.edu

Lydia Barbash-Riley

Indiana University, lbarbash@indiana.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <https://www.repository.law.indiana.edu/ijgls>

Part of the International Law Commons

Recommended Citation

Aman, Alfred C. and Barbash-Riley, Lydia (2015) "Editors' Note," Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies: Vol. 22 : Iss. 1 , Article 1.

Available at: <https://www.repository.law.indiana.edu/ijgls/vol22/iss1/1>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Law School Journals at Digital Repository @ Maurer Law. It has been accepted for inclusion in Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies by an authorized editor of Digital Repository @ Maurer Law. For more information, please contact rvaughan@indiana.edu.

JEROME HALL LAW LIBRARY

INDIANA UNIVERSITY
Maurer School of Law
Bloomington

Editors' Note

Issue 1 of Volume 22 of the Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies explores the law school as a site of globalization. It features a keystone article by Professors Mindie Lazarus-Black and Julie Globokar that examines the experiences of foreign students seeking admission to U.S. LL.M. programs from the perspectives of these students and the administrators who make the admissions decisions. Their Article analyzes quantitative data; narratives; interviews with students and university administrators; and the layers of international, national, state, and local laws to understand who is being included in U.S. law schools and what this reveals about how audit culture and the self-selection of foreign attorneys shape the admissions process and thus the future of the globalized legal profession.

The Article is followed by five comments, which critique and expand on the themes in Lazarus-Black and Globokar's piece. The comments are authored by Professors Bryant G. Garth, Jayanth K. Krishnan and Vitor M. Dias, Jan Hoffman French, Ethan Michelson, and Bonnie Urciuoli.

Issue 1 also includes four notes from student authors proposing and analyzing new regulatory, policy, and management solutions for complex global problems.

The Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies is grateful to the authors whose work is published in Issue 1 for their scholarly contributions and ongoing commitment to the study of globalization and its relevance to law throughout the world.

Alfred C. Aman, Jr.

Faculty Editor, Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies, Volume 22

Roscoe C. O'Byrne Professor of Law

Indiana University Maurer School of Law—Bloomington, Indiana

Lydia A. Barbash-Riley

Editor-in-Chief, Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies, Volume 22

Juris Doctor and Master of Public Affairs Candidate 2016

Indiana University Maurer School of Law & School of Public and Environmental Affairs—Bloomington, Indiana

Indiana Journal of Global Legal Studies Vol. 22 #1 (Winter 2015)

© Indiana University Maurer School of Law