This Week in the Law School

Are universities the worst violators of First Amendment freedoms? You'll never find out because we're censoring the event! (It's a joke, settle down. The program is today at noon.) The Indiana Tax Court is here Friday for a hearing involving our very own Monroe County and CVS. Thanks to our BLSA alumni who are coming in Saturday to lead a bar prep course and to our Protective Order Project volunteers who will host a training session here Sunday.

Are Universities the Worst Violators of First Amendment Freedoms Today?

The free exchange of ideas on university campuses is currently being buried by student bodies eager to shut down contrarian points of view. This censorship, however, stifles academic freedom and intellectual diversity. The Federalist Society has invited Jordan Lorence, senior counsel at Alliance Defending Freedom, to speak about campus speech and academic freedom. Profs. Steve Sanders and Alex Tanford will be on the panel. Free food will be provided. Moot Court Room, noon.

CLS Bible Study

Please join the Christian Legal Society for our weekly Bible study. We will be reading and discussing excerpts from the Bible. Feel free to bring your lunch, your friends, and an open mind. All are welcome. Room 215, noon.

FLF General Meeting

Come to the first general Feminist Law Forum meeting of the semester to learn about all of the exciting things we have planned, and to eat and play games. This meeting is especially important for those of you who would like to run for a leadership position next year, as we will be providing more information about the election process. Room 124, noon.

Outreach for Legal Literacy Meeting

Outreach for Legal Literacy is holding a meeting to explain mock trial procedures and to distribute applications for executive board positions. This meeting should take about 30 minutes. One member from each volunteer group must attend. Lunch will be provided. Room 120, noon.

New Cybersecurity Professional Opportunity

As recent headlines attest, cybersecurity is now more important than ever. It can no longer only be the responsibility of chief information officers — it relies on leaders who appreciate the technical, business, and legal aspects of cybersecurity risk management. Understanding the multifaceted cyber threat and how to mitigate it will open multiple pathways in this vital area. Beginning in fall 2017, get the skills you need to be an effective cybersecurity professional with a Master of Science in Cybersecurity Risk Management from Indiana University. Unlike other programs that focus only on certain aspects of cybersecurity, this first-of-its-kind interdisciplinary degree program brings together cybersecurity courses from law, business, and computer science. You'll get the interprofessional knowledge you need to handle diverse cyber threats in your chosen career. You'll be trained to promote information and systems security, protect privacy, and address cyber threats to national and international security. You'll become an effective cybersecurity professional. Apply today! For more information, check out: cybersecurityprograms.indiana.edu. Please note you will be able to count at least 9-credit hours of your JD toward fulfilling Cybersecurity MS requirements, and that a hybrid (online) option is available, but that both degrees must be conferred concurrently. Contact Prof. Scott Shackelford with any questions (sjshacke@indiana.edu).
