Basic mediation and restorative justice training for fall
40 hours beginning Sept. 8 on Zoom

The Community Justice and Mediation Center (CJAM) offers a 40-hour training program for those interested in learning about conflict resolution, mediation, and restorative justice. Participants will enhance their interpersonal skills in communication and listening, problem solving, and negotiation, and they will increase their understanding of restorative justice philosophy and methods, sources of conflict, and processes leading to constructive conflict resolution. The training should benefit anyone concerned with managing conflict and its resolution. The training also provides the background and skills necessary to work as a community mediator and restorative justice practitioner and qualifies participants to volunteer in CJAM's programs. The training will be led by senior mediators and restorative justice practitioners.

The training will take place on Zoom Thursday evenings, 7-9 p.m., and Saturdays, 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m., over five weeks beginning September 7 and continuing through October 7. Tuition is $300 ($275 if received by September 1). Learn more about the training and to register. You may also apply for a scholarship. For questions or more information, e-mail training@cjamcenter.org.

Faculty and staff news

Professor Sarah Jane Hughes has submitted her 18th article for the American Bar Association’s Survey of Cyberspace Law, published annually in the winter issue of The Business Lawyer. This year, her contributions focus on major federal actions relating to cryptocurrencies and providers of crypto, the right to escheat abandoned property (a gloss on earlier SCOTUS decisions), and enforcement against banks that opened accounts without customers’ permission. She also submitted her 2023 update of her volume of the Hawkland Series on the UCC, which focuses on non-UCC payments including payments governed by federal law and payments made using cryptocurrencies. Chapter 7 on Enforcement was fully reorganized and soon will be available on Westlaw and later in hard copy. The Hawkland Series is searchable.

We are sorry to say that Josie Brush, the associate director of admissions, is moving on to another IU-Bloomington department. Her last day will be Wednesday, 8/31, after which she will take on the role of Sexual Misconduct Investigator in the Office of Student Conduct. Josie has been an enthusiastic ambassador for the Law School, positively touching the lives of numerous students and admission colleagues. Please find the time to stop by Room 224 to wish her well before her last day.
