NEWS OF BENCH AND BAR

FIRST DISTRICT

The Evansville Bar Association met on Wednesday morning, January 2, 1929, to present resolutions on the retirement of Superior Judge Edgar Durre and Probate Judge Elmer Q. Lockyear and to welcome Judge Edwin C. Henning, who succeeds Judge Durre, and Judge Travis B. Williams, who takes the probate bench. Judge Durre retired to become head of the Trust Department of the Old National Bank and Judge Lockyear took office on the State Appellate bench. The resolutions on the retirement of Judges Durre and Lockyear were read by John W. Spencer and by James T. Walker, respectively. Henry B. Walker, president of the Indiana State Bar Association, spoke briefly.

SIXTH DISTRICT

The meeting of the Fayette County Bar Association was held Tuesday, January 15, 1929.

The Shelby County Bar Association met in special session at Shelbyville in honor of Judge Harry C. Morrison, who retired from the judgeship of the Shelby County circuit. Judge Morrison's long and distinguished service was commended in a resolution and individual members of the Shelby County Bar gave expression to the high esteem in which he is held by the legal profession.

Judge James A. Emmert, who succeeds Judge Morrison, was welcomed at a special meeting of the Shelby County Bar Association at the opening of the January term of court. Albert F. Ray presided and after Judge Emmert had been escorted to the bench by the bailiffs of the court, Ralph Adams presented him with a new gavel and greeted the new judge in the name of the Shelby County Bar Association.

SEVENTH DISTRICT

Charles P. Taft II, prosecutor of Hamilton County, Cincinnati, Ohio, spoke at a joint meeting and dinner of the Marion County Bar Association and the Indianapolis City Manager League, February 6th, 1929. Mr. Taft spoke on the city manager plan. Michael E. Foley, president of the Marion County Bar Association, presided at the meeting.

EIGHTH DISTRICT

The annual banquet of the Madison County Bar Association was held at the Grand Hotel at Anderson Thursday, January 3rd. The election of officers was held at the meeting. Charles T. Sansberry was elected president, Conrad S. Arkens, vice-president, and Philip B. O'Neill, secretary. Walter Myers, of Indianapolis, addressed the Association and William Herschell talked and recited selections from his poems. Thirty-five members of the Madison Bar Association were present including members of the bar associations of Anderson, Elwood and Alexandria.

NINTH DISTRICT

Prominent jurists and attorneys of Indiana gathered at the Crawfordsville Country Club to pay tribute and honor to Judge Jerre West, who was completing his thirty-two years of service on the bench of the Montgomery county circuit. The meeting was under the auspices of the Montgomery County Bar Association. Charles Johnston, one of the oldest members of the Montgomery County bar, presided and addresses were made by Judge Robert C. Baltzell, Chief Justice Clarence Martin, Chief Justice Solon Enlow, Michael E. Foley, Daniel Sims, Judge West and the judge-elect who will succeed Judge West, Edgar A. Rice. Judge West was presented with a large silver loving cup, a gift of the bar association, and Beveridge's "The Life of Chief Justice John Marshall."

TENTH DISTRICT

The Tippecanoe County Bar Association held a meeting January 12, 1929, President Frank Kimmel in the chair.

Willard E. Van Horne, Sr., East Chicago attorney, was chosen to head the Lake County Bar Association during 1929 at the January meeting held Tuesday, January 15th, in Hammond superior court. Mr. Van Horne succeeds Judge Virgil S. Reiter, who has been president of the bar association for several terms.

Other officers elected were Oscar Haney, Hammond, vice-president; Frank Keenan, East Chicago, secretary, and Emil Bauer, Hammond, treasurer.

At the meeting the barristers' organization decided unanimously to continue its policy of sponsoring constitutional oratorical contests in the county high schools. Revision of the bar docket also will be undertaken by a committee to be appointed in the near future.

ELEVENTH DISTRICT

Members of the Grant County Bar Association gave a banquet at the Spencer Hotel at Marion, Indiana, in honor of Judge J. Frank Charles, of the Grant County circuit, who is retiring from the bench after a service of twelve years. President George M. Coon presided over the banquet and introduced each member of the association who in turn paid tribute to Judge Charles. Judge Charles will be succeeded in office by Judge Oliver S. Clawson.
