1973

Criminal Law Notes: The Uniform Controlled Substance Act of 1973 -- A Hiatus in Criminal Law

F. Thomas Schornhorst

Indiana University Maurer School of Law

Follow this and additional works at: http://www.repository.law.indiana.edu/facpub

Part of the Criminal Law Commons, and the State and Local Government Law Commons

Recommended Citation
http://www.repository.law.indiana.edu/facpub/2471

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Faculty Scholarship at Digital Repository @ Maurer Law. It has been accepted for inclusion in Articles by Maurer Faculty by an authorized administrator of Digital Repository @ Maurer Law. For more information, please contact wattn@indiana.edu.
One of the more intriguing questions working its way up through Indiana courts is whether the state was without any criminal law relating to the sale, possession, or use of marijuana, lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD) and other non-narcotic drugs from 2 p.m. July 26, 1973 (the promulgation date of the Indiana Acts of 1973) to 12:01 a.m., October 1, 1973, (the effective date of the Uniform Controlled Substances Act, IC 1971, 35-24-1, Burns §§ 10-3558 et seq. (Supp. 1973)).

During the 1973 session the General Assembly moved to consolidate the penal law coverage of narcotics and other dangerous drugs in a single act. Coverage had been split between (1) the Uniform Narcotic Drug Act (IC 1971, 35-24-1, Burns §§ 10-3519 et seq.) dealing with the opiates and cocaine, and (2) the Dangerous Drug Act (IC 1971, 16-6-8, Burns §§ 35-3331 et seq.) covering, among other things, marijuana and LSD.

Here's what happened. The legislature amended the Dangerous Drug Act by striking from the definition of "dangerous drug" the following subsections: "(4) any hallucinogenic, psychodelic, psychogen drug or substance including but not limited to cannabis [marijuana] or . . . LSD; or (5) any drug appearing on the lists of drugs under Schedules I, II, III and IV of the Controlled Substance Act [21 U.S.C. § 812], and any drugs included therein by duly promulgated regulation." Coverage of these items was provided in the Uniform Controlled Substances Act, supra, that was passed during the same session.

But the two actions did not mesh. The amendment of the Dangerous Drug Act became effective with the promulgation of the 1973 Acts on July 26. However, Section 7 of the Controlled Substances Act stipulated that the new law would not go into effect until October 1, and the savings clause of the Controlled Substances Act referred only to the repealed Uniform Narcotic Drug Act.

Criminal Law HIatus Results

The inescapable result was a hiatus in the criminal law with regard to a variety of non-narcotic drugs. Instead of a legislative remedy for this serious oversight, a cure was sought by causing the State Board of Pharmacy to issue a rule declaring marijuana, LSD, and other "controlled substances" to be dangerous drugs. The asserted authority for this action was the provision in a section of the Dangerous Drug Act which delegated to the Board of Pharmacy power to include other dangerous drugs in the criminal law with regard to a "dangerous drug." IC 1971, 16-6-8-2(j), Burns §§ 35-3332 et seq. (Supp. 1973) covering, among other things, marijuana and LSD.

Here's what happened. The legislature amended the Dangerous Drug Act by striking from the definition of "dangerous drug" the following subsections: "(4) any hallucinogenic, psychodelic, psychogen drug or substance including but not limited to cannabis [marijuana] or . . . LSD; or (5) any drug appearing on the lists of drugs under Schedules I, II, III and IV of the Controlled Substance Act [21 U.S.C. § 812], and any drugs included therein by duly promulgated regulation." Coverage of these items was provided in the Uniform Controlled Substances Act, supra, that was passed during the same session.

But the two actions did not mesh. The amendment of the Dangerous Drug Act became effective with the promulgation of the 1973 Acts on July 26. However, Section 7 of the Controlled Substances Act stipulated that the new law would not go into effect until October 1, and the savings clause of the Controlled Substances Act referred only to the repealed Uniform Narcotic Drug Act.

Criminal Law HIatus Results

The inescapable result was a hiatus in the criminal law with regard to a variety of non-narcotic drugs. Instead of a legislative remedy for this serious oversight, a cure was sought by causing the State Board of Pharmacy to issue a rule declaring marijuana, LSD, and other "controlled substances" to be dangerous drugs. The asserted authority for this action was the provision in a section of the Dangerous Drug Act which delegated to the Board of Pharmacy power to include other dangerous drugs in the criminal law with regard to a "dangerous drug." IC 1971, 16-6-8-2(j), Burns §§ 35-3332 et seq. (Supp. 1973) covering, among other things, marijuana and LSD.

Here's what happened. The legislature amended the Dangerous Drug Act by striking from the definition of "dangerous drug" the following subsections: "(4) any hallucinogenic, psychodelic, psychogen drug or substance including but not limited to cannabis [marijuana] or . . . LSD; or (5) any drug appearing on the lists of drugs under Schedules I, II, III and IV of the Controlled Substance Act [21 U.S.C. § 812], and any drugs included therein by duly promulgated regulation." Coverage of these items was provided in the Uniform Controlled Substances Act, supra, that was passed during the same session.

But the two actions did not mesh. The amendment of the Dangerous Drug Act became effective with the promulgation of the 1973 Acts on July 26. However, Section 7 of the Controlled Substances Act stipulated that the new law would not go into effect until October 1, and the savings clause of the Controlled Substances Act referred only to the repealed Uniform Narcotic Drug Act.

Criminal Law HIatus Results

The inescapable result was a hiatus in the criminal law with regard to a variety of non-narcotic drugs. Instead of a legislative remedy for this serious oversight, a cure was sought by causing the State Board of Pharmacy to issue a rule declaring marijuana, LSD, and other "controlled substances" to be dangerous drugs. The asserted authority for this action was the provision in a section of the Dangerous Drug Act which delegated to the Board of Pharmacy power to include other dangerous drugs in the criminal law with regard to a "dangerous drug." IC 1971, 16-6-8-2(j), Burns §§ 35-3332 et seq. (Supp. 1973) covering, among other things, marijuana and LSD.

Here's what happened. The legislature amended the Dangerous Drug Act by striking from the definition of "dangerous drug" the following subsections: "(4) any hallucinogenic, psychodelic, psychogen drug or substance including but not limited to cannabis [marijuana] or . . . LSD; or (5) any drug appearing on the lists of drugs under Schedules I, II, III and IV of the Controlled Substance Act [21 U.S.C. § 812], and any drugs included therein by duly promulgated regulation." Coverage of these items was provided in the Uniform Controlled Substances Act, supra, that was passed during the same session.

But the two actions did not mesh. The amendment of the Dangerous Drug Act became effective with the promulgation of the 1973 Acts on July 26. However, Section 7 of the Controlled Substances Act stipulated that the new law would not go into effect until October 1, and the savings clause of the Controlled Substances Act referred only to the repealed Uniform Narcotic Drug Act.

Criminal Law HIatus Results

The inescapable result was a hiatus in the criminal law with regard to a variety of non-narcotic drugs. Instead of a legislative remedy for this serious oversight, a cure was sought by causing the State Board of Pharmacy to issue a rule declaring marijuana, LSD, and other "controlled substances" to be dangerous drugs. The asserted authority for this action was the provision in a section of the Dangerous Drug Act which delegated to the Board of Pharmacy power to include other dangerous drugs in the criminal law with regard to a "dangerous drug." IC 1971, 16-6-8-2(j), Burns §§ 35-3332 et seq. (Supp. 1973) covering, among other things, marijuana and LSD.

Here's what happened. The legislature amended the Dangerous Drug Act by striking from the definition of "dangerous drug" the following subsections: "(4) any hallucinogenic, psychodelic, psychogen drug or substance including but not limited to cannabis [marijuana] or . . . LSD; or (5) any drug appearing on the lists of drugs under Schedules I, II, III and IV of the Controlled Substance Act [21 U.S.C. § 812], and any drugs included therein by duly promulgated regulation." Coverage of these items was provided in the Uniform Controlled Substances Act, supra, that was passed during the same session.

But the two actions did not mesh. The amendment of the Dangerous Drug Act became effective with the promulgation of the 1973 Acts on July 26. However, Section 7 of the Controlled Substances Act stipulated that the new law would not go into effect until October 1, and the savings clause of the Controlled Substances Act referred only to the repealed Uniform Narcotic Drug Act.

Criminal Law HIatus Results

The inescapable result was a hiatus in the criminal law with regard to a variety of non-narcotic drugs. Instead of a legislative remedy for this serious oversight, a cure was sought by causing the State Board of Pharmacy to issue a rule declaring marijuana, LSD, and other "controlled substances" to be dangerous drugs. The asserted authority for this action was the provision in a section of the Dangerous Drug Act which delegated to the Board of Pharmacy power to include other dangerous drugs in the criminal law with regard to a "dangerous drug." IC 1971, 16-6-8-2(j), Burns §§ 35-3332 et seq. (Supp. 1973) covering, among other things, marijuana and LSD.

Here's what happened. The legislature amended the Dangerous Drug Act by striking from the definition of "dangerous drug" the following subsections: "(4) any hallucinogenic, psychodelic, psychogen drug or substance including but not limited to cannabis [marijuana] or . . . LSD; or (5) any drug appearing on the lists of drugs under Schedules I, II, III and IV of the Controlled Substance Act [21 U.S.C. § 812], and any drugs included therein by duly promulgated regulation." Coverage of these items was provided in the Uniform Controlled Substances Act, supra, that was passed during the same session.
Numerous Questions Unanswered

This leaves us with the question whether Rule 27 was effective to preserve criminal penalties with regard to the drugs mentioned therein during the period of the legislatively created hiatus—July 26 to October 1, 1973. Courts responding to this question will have to deal with the following questions:

1. Was it a valid exercise of administrative rule-making authority to place within the coverage of a criminal statute substances which the legislature expressly removed?
2. Since the statute authorizes the Board of Pharmacy to declare substances to be dangerous drugs only if they have “qualities similar to that of any dangerous drug,” is the Board required to examine available scientific evidence regarding a drug alleged to be dangerous (e.g., marijuana) and base its finding on such evidence?
3. May the Board, as it apparently did with Rule 27, regard the absence of stated opposition to the rule as sufficient basis for its adoption?
4. Did the Board, as it must, adhere to the legislative criteria that delimit its rule-making authority?
5. Did the Board act in good faith?
6. Was the notice and hearing provided “reasonable” as required by IC 1971, 16-6-8-1(j), Burns 35-3332 (j) (Supp. 1973)? Does the inclusion of the word “reasonable” in this section require more than minimal, pro forma compliance with the administrative rule-making notice requirements of IC 1971, 4-22-2-4, Burns § 60-1504?
7. Is Rule 27 valid if, as revealed by the Board’s minutes, it was adopted (in default of opposition) on June 25, when the only published notice set the hearing date for June 26?
8. Is it ever appropriate for the legislature to delegate to an administrative board power to create new felonies?

While these questions probably do not exhaust the considerations that must go into an examination of Rule 27, they suggest that the state will have a difficult time defending the Board of Pharmacy action against the attacks that are sure to come.

Model Office Open

YOU CAN BE A CHARTER MEMBER IN THIS OFFICE CONDOMINIUM COMPLEX AND SAVE MONEY

Site: Northeast corner of E. 62nd and Ind. 37

There are still a few offices left in the first phases of this unique complex designed for professional men. You can save from 3 to 5% by purchasing now since the prices of later phases will necessarily have to be raised due to higher building costs. Join the growing number of doctors, dentists, real estate analysts and related service facilities who have decided to own rather than rent their office space. Many professional people are finding they can convert their rent dollars into net worth without risking a hazardous investment. Think about it!

AVERAGE MONTHLY COSTS*

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Size</th>
<th>Cost</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>800 sq. ft.</td>
<td>$261</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1000 sq. ft.</td>
<td>$325</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1200 sq. ft.</td>
<td>$391</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

*Includes principal and interest, taxes and insurance, assuming an 80% mortgage for 25 years @ 8 1/2%. Purchase includes a completely finished interior (carpeting, partitions, ceiling, lighting, etc.) and extras may be ordered to desired specifications. Other financing terms are also available.

For information contact:
COMMUNITY ARTS NORTHEAST
1502 East 46th Street, Indianapolis, Indiana 46205
Telephone (317) 253-1261

A request on your letterhead will bring a complete brochure presentation to you by return mail.